Fatty 'Cue is hog-wild in B'klyn again

New to the scene ...
After closing more than a year ago, Fatty 'Cue (fattycue.com) has reopened in Williamsburg with a swanky new look. The first floor is now focused on the bar, with cocktails created by Phil Ward. Upstairs in the dining room, new dishes will include pigs' ears with uni sauce and chili leg of lamb. Desserts are by Butter & Scotch, including caramel corns inspired by cocktails like green chili margarita and Dark & Stormy. Sicilian chef Philip Guardione of the SoHo wine bar Piccola Cucina Enoteca is opening Piccola Cucina Osteria a block south at 196 Spring St. The casual restaurant will focus on the dishes of Guardione's hometown of Catania, including a Swordfish Involtini, thinly sliced swordfish wrapped around buffalo mozzarella and served with stewed tomatoes. Italian coffee maker Iilly (illy.com) is rolling out MonoArabica coffee (1), single-origin coffees from three different countries. Brazil's is full-bodied with hints of chocolate; Guatemala's is medium-bodied and has notes of caramel and honey, and Ethiopia's is medium-bodied with hints of jasmine and citrus.
