

EATER

April 21, 2014

RICH PEOPLE THINGS

Bagatelle's $1K Sundae Includes Dom Sorbet and Jewelry

Clubby Meatpacking District restaurant Bagatelle has just put a $1000 ice cream sundae on its menu. According to a press release, the "Mauboussin Mega Sundae" consists of scoops of vanilla ice cream and Dom Perignon Rose sorbet topped with chocolate truffles, macarons, whipped cream, chocolate vodka sauce, and "gilded brownies," plus the obligatory sprinkling of gold leaf. It also comes with a Mauboussin ring made of black steel and white gold, which is, somewhat disappointingly, served on the side instead of buried like treasure in the fudge sauce.

The ring itself is priced at $530 on the Mauboussin website, which means that diners are really paying $470 for the ice cream, gold leaf, and chocolate vodka sauce concoction. The city's only other $1000 sundae is the one at expensive food specialist Serendipity 3. That one includes gold-coated almonds, sugar paste flowers, and the world's most expensive chocolate sauce, but no jewelry.