Don't let it melt! $1,000 ice cream sundae boasts gold leaf, champagne sorbet and a DIAMOND RING

- The frozen dessert will hit the menu at Bagatelle in New York - a celebrity hangout much loved by the Kardashian sisters

The humble ice cream sundae has been given a luxury makeover, pushing its price tag up to an unappetizing $1,000.

Bagatelle, a French bistro in New York's Meatpacking district much loved by celebrities including the Kardashian sisters along with Jay-Z and his wife Beyonce, will add the pricey dessert to its menu on May 1.

The frozen recipe features vanilla ice cream, chocolate truffles, French macaroons, Dom Perignon rosé champagne sorbet, chocolate vodka sauce, brownies, whipped cream and the pièce de résistance - a diamond ring.

Savor every bite: The $1,000 Mauboussin Mega Sundae features vanilla ice cream, French macaroons, Dom Perignon rosé champagne sorbet, brownies, whipped cream and the piece de resistance - a diamond ring

The piece of jewelry - made by the Parisian brand Mauboussin - comes presented on the side in a presentation box, so diners needn't worry about accidentally swallowing it in a scoop.

Taking its name after the ring, the ice cream is called the Mauboussin Mega Sundae. It was created by Bagatelle's executive chef Sebastien Chamaret.

The 'Moi non plus/Toi non plus' black steel and white gold ring is certainly part of the reason why it is priced so high. It usually retails at $590

But the ingredients Mr Chamaret used also come out at the top end of the scale.

A-list hangout: The dessert will launch at Bagatelle, a French bistro in New York's, next month

Indeed, the Dom Perignon rosé champagne used to make the sorbet, is priced at $1,150 a bottle on Bagatelle's menu.

The giant stack comes served in a big glass, which diners cannot take home.

In 2007, New York's Serendipity 3 restaurant entered the Guinness World Record Books for serving the most expensive sundae on the planet that cost $1,000.

However, unlike its soon-to-be rival sundae, it does not come with jewelry and must be requested 48 hours in advance.

Bagatelle also has branches in Los Angeles, St Tropez, Miami, St Barths, Sao Paolo and Las Vegas.
